CHRISTMAS BOXES CARRY CHEER TO NEEDY FAMILIES

Christmas Dinners Provided Redwood People By Service Club Members, Elks Lodge, School Pupils, and Others as Holiday Gift to Needy

Joy and Christmas cheer were brought to more than 70 needy families of Redwood City this year, though the combined efforts of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club the Redwood City Lions Club and the San Mateo Lodge of Elks. Three organizations pooled their efforts this year with the result that a sizeable box of Christmas provisions was provided for families where it was found Christmas cheer would be lacking due to financial difficulties or other causes.

The boxes were prepared at the fire house by members of the clubs assisted by the Boys' Council and the Girls' Council of the Sequoia Union high school, the Yomecan club and other volunteers. The high school students also assisted in the distribution of the boxes. The boxes contained a dressed chicken, potatoes, celery, peas, onions, tomatoes, canned corn, plums, peaches, milk butter, bread, sugar, rice, prunes, oranges, apples, coffee, beans, nuts and candy. In fact each box supplied a complete Christmas dinner for a whole family, and each box was wrapped in Christmas colors and decorated with holly.

For a number of years the service clubs have carried on this work at Christmas tide, at first each conducted its own distribution, but when it was found that some cases were duplicated and many others were not called to the attention of any of the clubs, a co-operative plan was adopted by which the Christmas charity is done by a committee of members from all the various organizations.

Th committee in charge of the distribution of the baskets consisted of Z. T. Thorning and Carl Stoner of the Kiwanis Club; Milton Johnson and Louis Jenkins of the Lions Club and Asa Hull, Lou Pollard and W. P. Hogan of the Elks.

Members of the Yomecans Club assisted in the packing which was carried on at the central fire house, and in the distribution. Eight high school girls under the direction of Mrs. Thorning decorated the baskets.

OIL STATION BANDIT EMPTIES REGISTER—KIDNAPS ATTENDANT

Attendant Taken in Car From Millbrae to Coastside—Put Out of Car at Salada Beach; Money Taken From Till at Station

The robbery of a service station and the kidnapping of the attendant in charge was reported to Sheriff J. J. McGrath Wednesday morning by K. R. Hudson, proprietor of a service station at Millbrae. Veale told his employer that two men had driven up to the station in a car and that one drew a gun and covered him, while the other took the contents of the cash register, said to be about $75. The two men then ordered the attendant to get into their car, and drove to the coast. About three miles from Salada Beach he was ordered to get out of the car, and the two men drove away. In addition to the money from the till, Veale says that they took a gold watch which he was wearing. He walked into Salada Beach and called his employer on the telephone.

Canada Farmers Hit By Prices

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 23. (UP)—The farmers of western Canada who threatened to secede from the Dominion Government and set up a separate government of their own, it developed tonight, really did not mean it.

They talked about a revolution and saw that the talk got into all the newspapers in the United States and Canada, merely to call attention of federal authorities to their plight, the farm leaders in Winnipeg, the wheat capital of western Canada, agreed.

All is not well on the vast, rolling praries of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, where wheat is king and almost the whole populace labors in the monarch's service. World's wheat prices are out of joint. Canadian wheat prices are near the 50 cents per bushel level.

Farmers are making no money. Some of them produced their enormous crops this year at an actual loss. The wheat growers, with their bumper crops this year are liabilities instead of assets, are holding meetings in cross roads halls, in village churches to discuss their difficulties.

At one such meeting in Wilkie, Sask., the assembled farmers announced that they had decided the provinces of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta would be better off if they seceded from Canada and set up an independent commonwealth with a central government of its own.

Other meetings have resulted in demands for dollar wheat, of threats to quit paying taxes until something is done by the government about the agricultural situation.

The irritated farmers believe that the fiscal policy of the Dominion Government is responsible for present conditions. The Canadian tariff, they hold, is such that an addition to increasing the cost of the goods the farmers must buy, it has had the effect of closing many of the markets of the world to the produce of the western Canada farms.

Redwood Plumber Takes Own Life

Will C. Stewart Found Dead In His Home at 519 Heller Street

The body of William C. Stewart, a local plumber, was found at his home, 519 Heller street, Wednesday afternoon. The man had shot himself with a 25-automatic revolver through the mouth. On the table in the living room, where the body was lying was a note left by Stewart saying that he was ending his life on account of ill-health. The note also directed that the James Crowe Co have charge of his funeral and that his remains be cremated.

Stewart, who worked for eight years for P. E. Brand, local plumbing contractor, failed to appear for work a week ago Friday morning. Little was thought about this however, as he had told his employer the day before that he contemplated a visit to his mother, who resides in Riverside. When word was received from the mother on Wednesday of this week that he had not arrived at her home, Mr. Brand, accompanied by Officer Sylvester Douglass, went to Stewart's home and there found the body. It is believed that Stewart ended his life sometime Thursday night. The body was taken in charge by Deputy Coroner J. R. Phillips and removed to the undertaking parlors of the James Crowe Co. The funeral will probably be held Saturday and the inquest on Thursday morning.

Stewart leaves a mother and step-father and four sisters residing in Riverside and another sister, Mrs. C. R. Bubb, of Mt. View. He was a member of Redwood City Lodge No. 168, F. & A. M.

After Christmas Reflections

Now that the Christmas festivities are over we have a splendid opportunity for looking over the events of 1930, and while there has been sadness and unemployment in our midsts, this difficulty has been met with brave hearts and courage. Christmas has brought to all of us peace of men of Good Will and we feel that our community has complied in the conditions to claim the promise. Christmas has brought peace and encouragement, even to sad hearts, and our children, even the poorest, have not been deprived the privilege of seing Santa Claus.

Redwood City has prospered to a certain extent during the trying days of 1930. Several new families have come to make their home among us. These people came here because they liked the town, the community and the people. Now that they are here, they express freely their pleasure in the good friends they have made. Redwood City has a reputation for co-operation, kindliness and the people are democratic in their social ideas. There is little of cliquiness and snobbery in our social life. All these things help to make the town attractive.

To attract in a social and business way more of just the type of people who have lately come among us, is just what we want. More fine families and more nice, comfortable homes are the most coveted prizes of any community.

A continuation of our present peaceful enjoyment of pleasant social and business relations is our best method of making life here attractive. No neighborhood jealousies shall cloud our mornings and unkind gossip shall enter the other fellow's store. He is too busy waiting on his own customers. No animosities shall enter the co-operation between the churches.

Let us keep thru the new near, the spirit of the Christmas message, "Peace on Earth to Men of Good Will."

Just a little more co-operation on the part of everybody and Redwood City will be the leading town in California.

Cuba and Intervention

Cuba is hoeing a rocky row and enemies of President Machado have been talking about intervention by the United States goverment. It will be remembered that when Colonel Roosevelt was President that he sent Mr. Taft to Cuba with the result that the United States intervened and restored peace and order.

President Hoover is inclined to let Cuba solve its own problems, without intervention, in line with the thirty-year policy of the United States as it was laid down by former Secretary of State Elihu Root.

Memorial to Walter Camp

Since Walter Camp originated the idea of choosing an All-American football team from each year's leading college players, the idea has spread and taken root until nowadays there are hundreds of all-American teams picked by newspapers, press associations, sports authorities and others, throughout the country.

But Walter Camp's selection has remained the standard and final authority. For many years prior to his death, his official choice was announced each year by Collier's Weekly. After his death, the institution was perpetuated by Collier's as a memorial to the Father of America's greatest amateur pastime.

This year, the all-American team, just announced by Collier's, is more representative than ever before. Colleges from the Atlantic to the Pacific are represented in the men selected—colleges great and small, northern and southern.

Ticknor, the almost unanimous choice of the judges for the center position, is a Harvard undergraduate. Carideo, undisputed selection for quarter-back, is from Notre Dame. Dodd, half-back, is from the University of Tennessee, and his partner on the other side of the line is Pinckert of Southern California.

The full-back, Macaluso, is from Colgate, an eastern university; while Hein, utility lineman, comes from the opposite end of the country, being a student at Washington State. The ends Dalrymple and Fesler, are students at Tulane and Ohio State. The tackles, Sington and Rhea, are from the University of Alabama and the University of Nebraska; the guards, Koch and Beckett, are credited to Baylor and California.

In rounding up the year's selections, the members of this greatest of all athletic juries were faced with an almost incredible amount of work, which they performed with a fine mixture of earnestness and enthusiasm. The entire country, from Florida to Washington, from Texas to Maine, swarmed with vast herds of star football players who from late September to mid-December were giving all they had in the way of speed, skill, power, courage and brains to the game that lured them from the softer ways of the college life into the drudgery of training and practice, heavy physical and mental pressure and man-to-man contact of hard blocking and harder tackling.

It is a stupendous task to gather all the statistics and opinions which go annually into this memorial to Walter Camp. The result is a worthy tribute to his service in helping, through intersectional athletics, to weld the American public into a single people.

Getting The Actual Count

In some quarters much stress is being laid on the great amount of unemployment throughout the country. It is to be remembered that there is always a large number who are unemployed—even when jobe are plentiful, so the exaggerated stories should be discounted to the actual number who are out of work, but who want to get jobs.

The farmer who has a good winter garden, some hogs to kill, a cow to milk, enough molasses for his famiiy and some corn in his crib will not suffer during the winter months.

Love's Sacrifice
By Mildred Barbour

The intrusion angered her and her expression must have betrayed her feelings.

CONCERNING THE ACTION AND CHARACTERS

Sally Todd and Lois Montgomery leave home to seek their fortunes in New York.

Sally's brother, Bert, who is in love with Lois, follows them.

Lois meets a young man whom she knew when she was a wealthy woman's secretary.

He and a chap named FRISBY show her and Sally little attention, but Lois' thoughts are chiefly on the problems of existence.

Lois finally gets a job with a firm of interior decorators. Sally struggles for a foothold in the movies. They have a hard time making both ends meet.

Sally enters hospital training, finally convinced that the films ha. no future for her.

Lois is absorbed i nher own work.

During her employer's illness, she is sent to the palatial residence of James Walton to make a preliminary report.

Sally's liking for gay company causes a coolness between herself and Lois.

It also involves Lois in difficulties with Bert.

Lois is strongly attracted to Walton, who is much older than herself, and very rich and distinguished.

—She finds him very cold and domineering.

—He demands she give up her friendship with Sally.

Sally, meanwhile, is in hot water at the hospital, because she is too fond of a good time.

Chapter 24

After an especially gay party she is assigned in an emergency to night duty.

She falls asleep while waiting for the special nurse to come, and the patient, in her delirium, rushes from the room and jumps from a window. By a miracle she escapes with minor injuries, but Sally's fate is sealed.

Unfit

She is dismissed in disgrace just before graduation.

Chapter 30.

Dr. Dale Randolph, out of sympathey, offers her a position in his office. He does not guess that Sally, while at the hospital, occasionally used drugs to bloster up her energies after gay parties.

Lois provides Sally with a little home in the country.

Sally falls in love with Dr. Randolph, who has no idea of her feeling for him.

Randolph meets Lois and likes her at once.

This is too much for Sally... She again resorts to the use of drugs, and, while in a befuddled condition, tells Randolph she loves him.

Randolph lays the situation before Lois and asks her help.

An anonymous letter linking Lois's name with Dr. Dandolph's reaches James Walton. He tells her that he does not believe the charge, but warns her to avoid any conduct that might cause idle talk.

Chapter 40.

She is convinced that the letter came from Sally. The latter takes an overdose of drugs, in what Lois believes to be a fit remorse, and Lois and Randolph again go to her aid.

Chapte 43.

An Unexpected Visitor

Sally was in such a black mood that she was frightened by her own thoughts. A week had passed since she had, by her own conduct, terminated her employment in Dr. Randolph's office. She had not seen him since the night when he and Lois had come to her home to save her from the consequences of the weakness that was so rapidly fastening itself upon her — an appetite for drugs.

She supposed she wouldn't see him again. That was all over. Lois, of course, could see him as often as she liked. They were social equals.

To Sally that thought was more galling than any other. It almost made her hate Lois. Certainly it made her so envious that she was willing to hurt her friend in almost any way that would, to her mind, even up the score between them. For Sally had reached the point where she felt that she had an honest grievance against Lois. She felt affronted because Lois had security, material comforts, a certain social position. If she had had these things, Sally told herself, Dale Randolph would not have been indifferent to her.

That Lois had offered, had given her security and comfort was something she would not admit now, any more than she would admit that there had never been the slightest chance of Dr. Randolph's falling in love with her.

The buzz of the door-bell aroused her from her bitter thoughts. There was the sound of a familiar voice in the hall. The door was thrown open, and her brother, Bert stood there. She stared at him blankly.

He stared back, waiting for a word from her. Then he shrugged and tossed his hat and coat upon a chair. "A very warm welcome, I must say, sister," he began. "You seem delighted to see me. I can tell it by the look in your eyes."

By this time Sally had found her voice. "I wasn't expecting you," she said weakly. "Why didn't you let me know that you were coming?"

Bert was strolling about the room, examining the furnishings with an ill-concealed air of surprise. He made no answer. Sally repeated her question crossly.

"I hardly knew myself that I was coming until I got here," he said. "Say, who is putting up for this place? You and Lois must have struck oil?"

"Lois is putting up for it," answered Sally briefly. "I just live in it."

"And where did she get the money, might one ask?" said Bert, affecting what he thought was a very sauve tone of voice.

"From her husband, I suppose."

Bert turned round with a start. "Her — her what?"

"Husband—h-u-s-b-a-n-d," snapped Sally. "Didn't you know she had one?"

"I — I — no, I didn't" stammered Bert. "When——"

"I don't see how you could have have missed hearing about it," said Sally, "Everyone at home knows it."

"I havn't been at home for a long time," said Bert "Been here and there on business, so I havn't heard the news."

Sally looked at her brother keenly. She knew that for years he had loved Lois as much as it was possible for him to love anyone. She wondered whether it would be possible to turn the chagrin that he now felt to some advantage. So, determinedly ignoring the inner voice that tried to remind her of Losi's many kindnesses to her, she said:

"Lois married a very rich man — years older than herself, too."

Bert pounced on that statement. "Married him for his money, I'll wager."

Sally nodded. "Naturally," she said. "But I think she regrets it sometimes."

"Do you?" he asked eagerly. "Why?"

Sally threw her scruples overboard and plunged.

"Why, you know," she said cunningly, "that Lois was always very keen about you. I often think she wishes she——"

That was enough for Bert. Like Sally, he had a quick imagination.

"You mean that she is still in love with me?" he questioned.

"I think so — I'm sure of it," answered Sally. "In fact, she as good as told me so many times."

Bert's vanity was walking away with him.

"Why didn't you tell me this before?" he dmanded.

"That's the sort of thing you ought to be able to find out for yourself," she laughed. "Anyway, I've told you now."

When Bert left, Sally threw herself on the couch and wept. Her conscience was saying some hard things to her. She wanted to call Bert back and tell him that she had lied, but she couldn't quite bring herself to do that.

Perhaps she ought to telephone Lois and let her know that Bert was on his way to see her. She finally went to the 'phone, but the line was busy. So Bert arrived at Lois's home without word of his coming having preceded him.

"Just tell Mrs. Walton that a very old friend is here" he told the butler. "She'll know."

Then, when the butler had gone to deliver the message, he followed at a discreet distance. Lois had guests for tea, and she excused herself when the butler appeared and asked permission to give her a message. He hadn't finished speaking when Lois turned and saw Bert entering the room.

The intrusion angered her, and her expression must have betrayed her feelings. Bert drew back, surprised and hurt. After what Sally had told him, he hadn't expected this. Without realizing it, Lois had made another enemy.

HOW IT BEGAN... By Russ Murphy

WHY WE TEASE THE BRIDE AND GROOM

THE BRIDE AND GROOM CAN BLAME OUR SUPERSTITIOUS ANCESTORS FOR WEDDING DAY JOKES...OUR EARLY ANCESTORS BELIEVED THAT EVIL SPIRITS WERE DISTURBED AND SPITEFUL IF THEY SAW HUMAN BEINGS TOO HAPPY...YOUNG COUPLES WERE PLAGUED AND TEASED SO THE SPIRITS WOULD THINK IT A WASTE OF ENERGY TO ADD TO THEIR TROUBLES.

Knife Executes Triple Play

NEBARSKA CITY, Neb. (UP)—When one packing house worker tossed a piece of meat into the air there wasn't any way for him to know that it would come down on Pete Bernatowicze's knife, cause it to open and bury itself into Pete's knuckle for a moment, fall on to a bench and cut Walter James on his knuckles, then to the floor, where it struck pont down.

MAIL MUST GO

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa. (UP)—The mail must go through, even though it is not the air mail. When Carrier Norman A. Harshman serving Connellsville R. D. 3 in his automobile was stopped by a snow drift, John Biler, a resident, arrived with a team of horses and pulled Biler and his car over the entire route.

CAT ROBS STORE

BRAINERD, Minn. (UP)—A stray cat entered a local store through a broken window left by burglars and did more damage than the human intruders. The burglars escaped with $1.50 from the cash drawer, but the cat, when found the next morning, had chewed up seven dollars worth of muskrat hides.

HOLLYWOOD'S FILM SHOP

By GEORGE H. BEALE
United Press Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 24 (UP)—The novelists, biographers and jounalists, are going to have to get on their toes or a lot of good writing money is going into the hands of movie stars.

A desire to write has seized an amazing number of film players and they have lost no time in announcing the intention of turning out the the "great American novel" or "the great American short story."

Pola Negri told reporters in Paris recently that she is going to write the true story of her life and loves in order to correct erroneous impressions for which she blames Holly wood press agents.

Clara Bow intends to write her life story so that "for once it will be told the way it ought to be told."

Lois Morgan had dabbled at writing in a modest sort of a way. She has started hundreds of stories, she says. Some of them she finished and just recently, she claims, some have been accepted.

To earn her rejection slip honestly, Miss Moran submits her stories under a fictitious name.

Elissa Landi, whom Fox Films officials say will soon head the parade of the screen's dramatic actresses, has had two novels published and is working hard to complete her third.

Among the male film players who write Will Rogers is best known. In addition to his syndicated news articles he has turned out four books.

William S. Hart authored a book that had a good sale among young boys. John Barrymore turned out a book based on indicents of his own life.

GELLIVARE, Sweeden, (UP)—A combined diamond wedding and birthday celebration was observed here by F. G. Nordvall, a retired mining foreman, and his wife. On the day of their 75th wedding anniversary Nordvall was 100 years old and his wife 95.

INDIAN FORECASTS BIG SNOW

RAPID CITY, S. D., (UP)—Charging Horse, on old Sioux Indian, predicted plenty of snow this winter. According to the legends of his people, there will be as many snows as the moon is days old when the first tracking snow arrives. A tracking snow fell on the nineteenth day of the moon, he claims.

WOODSIDE

The Christmas spirit has come into the open. No more do we decorate the family Christmas tree in an inner room for the members of the family alone to look at and admire. The fancy for the outdoor, living Christmas tree has grown rapidly and where such a tree is not available then the household tree is set in the front window where its colored lights may cheer the passes-by and beckon to Santa Claus as well.

Many of the Woodside homes have trees out of doors, the one most widely seen and admired being the one on the Wobber place for it stands against the mountain side as high as the Easter cross and can be seen for miles in any direction. The forty foot pine tree on the Mowwe place is also a landmark. All along the highway through the village, in store or home or yard are these twinkling evidences of joy and cheer.

OHIO FIREMEN GIVEN BACK PAY FOR CHRISTMAS

HAMILTON, O., Dec. 23. (UP)—A pleasant surprise, coming almost as a Christmas gift, namely, checks for back pay earned eight years ago was received by members of the Hamilton fire department just prior to Christmas.

The city went "broke" eight years ago and 44 firemen stuck to their jobs from January 1 to January 16 without pay. When the city treasury was replenished the firemen never asked for their delinquent wages and consequently did not get them.

But the debt was not forgitten and just recently the city council passed a bill to clear the debt. The checks amount to $66 each.

DADDY OF FUTURISM URGES DYNAMIC COOKING

MILAN, Dec. 24. (UP). — F. T. Marinetti, founder of Futurism and now member of the Italian Academy, remembers his old creed from time to time. His latest is a manifesto urging the creation of a futurist cuisine. Hhe pleaded for a "more dynamic style of cooking, something more simultaneous and agile, something more vivid and heroic."

"Geese frozen in the moon," and "soup of roses and sun" were among the dainties suggested, but no practical help was offered as to how they should be prepared.

A Lecture on Christian Science

Entitled

Jesus, Our Exemplar

by

GAVIN W. ALLEN, C. S. B.
of Toronto, Ontario, Canada
Member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts

Gavin W. Allan, C. S. B., of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, a member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, delivered a lecture on Christian Science under the auspices of First Church of Christ, Scientist, Redwood City, in the McKinley grammar school auditorium, December 23, at 8 o'clock.

The lecturer was introduced by Mrs. Hugh S. McCord, who spoke as follows:

Friends:

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Redwood City, lovingly welcomes you this evening to hear a lecture on Christian Science.

The Christian Science Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., of which our speaker is a member, was established through the spiritual foresight and wisdom of our beloved leader, Mary Baker Eddy, in order that we may learn more of the beautiful Truth.

Our lecturer has chosen for his subject this evening, "Our Exemplar" and it is with pleasure that I present Mr. Gavin W. Allan of Toronto, Canada. Mr. Allen:

The Lecture

If we would understand Christianity,—its Principle and its practice,—we must begin by understanding its Founder, "the man Christ Jesus," because he and he alone has been its prefect exponent, its perfect demonstrator. If we examine the life of Jesus as portrayed in the Gospels we cannot fail to note some of his outsanding characteristics. Let us consider a few of his traits which have not been sufficiently stressed.

SELFLESSNESS

First, his selflessness. During the years of his ministry he seemed to have no ambition for place or power, no desire for superiority or preferment. It is true that just before he entered upon his ministry he passed through a great struggle in overcoming the false sense of self: the desire for fame and dominion strove to assert itself. But it is also true that this desire was completely routed, and that never again did it become apparent in his life.

Jesus' selflessness was manifested in service. He gave himself to others. He said, "I am among you as he that serveth." That was his life-work, serving God by serving his fellow men. Was it Jesus' desire that his followers should serve their fellows in the same way that he did, that is, in the same spirit? Did he commend a life of service as a practical ideal? Let us see. You will remember that on one occasion Jesus called his disciples to him and said, "Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you: but . . . whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." In Jesus' estimation, then the willingness and ability to serve ranked higher than the desire to be served. Service ranked higher than dictatorship; selflessness than selfishness.

Christ Jesus is our Exemplar, our ideal model. We as Christian Scientists are his followers. The ideals he presented, the qualities of mind he manifested, we must strive to emulate. Recognizing this, the Founder of the Christian Science movement, Mary Baker Eddy, in her "Advice to Students" wrote (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 303), "Let us serve instead of rule, knock instead of push at the door of human hearts, and allow to each and every one the same rights and privileges that we claim for ourselves."

But we were speaking of selflessness. Let us hear Mrs. Eddy again, this time somewhat more emphatically. In the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," she writes (p. 568), "Self-abnegation, by which we lay down all for Truth, or Christ, in our warfare against error, is a rule in Christian Science." Why should this be so? Because selflessness is an essential quality of spiritual man. Because selfulness, if we may use such a term, or the belief in selfhood apart from God, is not a quality of the real man and never did belong to him. God made man in His, God's image to express God. If man is the expression of God he cannot manifest a selfhood apart from God. You understand, of course, that when we speak of man as God's likeness we do not mean that mortals are God's likeness. Far from it. You and the material body which you may sometimes think of as yourself are two entirely different things. Physiologists tell us that our physical bodies are completely changed or renewed every few years. You may have had five or ten entirely different bodies, but no one of those bodies which you have left behind was you. Your true selfhood, the man of God's creating, is a mental, a spiritual being, the expression of God.

In order that we may the better understand the relationship existing between man and God, let me use an illustration. Take for example the sun and its rays. Each ray is supplied by the sun with its—the sun's-own qualities. A single ray does not express the sun completely, but it does express the qualities of the sun The ray has not a single quality of its own, that is, it has not a single quality that is not derived from the sun. Having no quality of its own it has no selfhood apart from the sun.

Now to make use of the illustration. God expressed Himself through spiritual man. Man as God's expresion is supplied moment by moment by God with God's reflected qualities, wisdom, intelligence, health, strength, etc. Individual man does not reflect God fully or completely, but he does reflect all the qualities of God. Man, then, has not a single quality of his own, has not a single quality underived from God: therefore for him to have a selfhood apart from God would be metaphysically impossible.

There is another way to look at this subject. According to Christian Science (Science and Health, p. 471), "man is, and forever has been God's reflection." A reflection calls attention to its original. Your image in a mirror expresses only your color, your figure, your action. It possesses no corporeality of its own, no thickness, no action. It cannot act of itself. It cannot be of itself. It has no existence apart from you. Now since man is God's likeness, as we are told in Genesis, you see how impossible it would be for man to have any action, any existence, any selfhood apart from God.

Christian Science is showing us that this is what is true about man. Such temptations, then, as selfpity, self-justification, self-righteousness, self-condemnation, and selfishness are based upon a false sense of self. Jesus, our Exemplar, who "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin," overcame this false sense of self completely. As his followers we are striving to do the same. How shall we succeed? First, by learning what man, God's likeness, is—by learning the truth about man—then by putting it into practice in our every thought of ourselves or our fellows.

In this warfare with the false sense of self, Mrs. Eddy has given us this inspiring message (Miscellaneous Writings, P. 118), "Be of good cheer; the warfare with one's self is grand; it gives one plenty of employment, and the divine Principle worketh with you,—and obedience crowns persistent effort with everlasting victory."

HUMILITY

Jesus was about his Father's business. He claimed no mind apart from God. He said, "I can of mine own self do nothing," and, "The Father . . . doeth the works." That is true humility. True humility is shown in the deliberate recognition of God as the source of all intelligence and power. Probably few qualities are so generally misunderstood as humility and meekness. Many people think these terms mean "being tamely submissive," "spiritless," or "easily imposed upon." This is due, of course, to a misunderstanding of what humility really is. Humility is not self-depreciation, rather is it true self-evaluation. It is not a weak, but a strong quality. Moses had it, and he was not weak. Jesus possessed it, and he was not weak. No, Jesus was a strong man in every way; he was strong physically, mentally, morally, and spiritually, and he possessed in abundant measure this strong quality, humility.

Jesus did not depreciate himself, rather did he rightly estimate his worth. He knew that his coming was the central fact of history, and that his words would not pass away, that is, the truths he stated would live forever, not because he presented them, but because they were true, therefore undying and winged with power. Isaiah expressed a similar confidence in the power and immortality of the Word, a power entirely independent of the person who uttered it. Speaking of the Word he said, "It shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Such confidence had he in the power of the Word declared.

It might be well for those of us who are Christian Scientists to ask ourselves, How much confidence have I in the power of the Word of God? How much confidence have I in a Christian Science treatment? Let us see. Let us suppose that before you knew anything about Christian Science you had heard that your neighbor had mistakenly taken a spoonful of poison. What would likely have been your first thought? Would it have been, He must be ill? Would it have been, Poison acts quickly?

Now, suppose you hear to-morrow that your neighbor has had a Christian Science treatment. What will likely be your first thought as a Christian Scientist? Will it be, He must be better, he must be well? Will it be, "The word of God is quick, and powerful?" If not, why not? It was Jesus' faith in Truth which prompted him to say, "My words shall not pass away," and Mrs. Eddy commenting on this passage has added (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 111), "And Jesus' faith in Truth must not exceed that of Christian Scientists who prove its power to be immortal."

This attitude of Jesus was quite in keeping with humility—the recognition of God as the only source of intelligence and power. Here is another statement of his, "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." Jesus attributed all power to God. Since humility was an outstanding quality of our Master, should it be, can it be disregarded by any of his followers?

But let us apply this to ourselves and to the present moment. Mrs. Eddy, who knew better than anyone else the qualifications of the Christian Scientist, has written (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 354), "Humility is the first step in Christian Science." If humility is the first step, might it not be well for each of us to inquire, Have I taken this step? Let us not judge our neighbor in this. Let us answer the question for ourselves. Do I take credit to myself, or do I naturally and whole-heartedly ascribe to God the honor for any good I have been instrumental in accomplishing? Am I alert to think regarding any good I may have accomplished, I have of myself done nothing, the Father has done it all? If so, we are manifesting a natural phase of true humanhood.

SEEING THE GOOD

Another characteristic of Jesus was his habit of seeing and appreciating the good in his fellow men. He saw more good in men than they suspected themselves. As he passed through Capernaum he saw a tax-gatherer in his office. Those about him saw in this man a traitor to every standard of patriotism, a man living on his countrymen. Jesus saw more and invited the man to be one of his company. Something in the man awoke, "and he left all, rose up, and followed him," and there stepped forth Matthew, the disciple.

The self-righteous scribes and Pharisees dragged a woman soiled with degrading sin and set her before Jesus for judgment. Their intention was to lead Jesus into a trap in order that they might have a charge against him. Jesus saw what they saw, but he saw more and said to the woman, "Go, and sin no more." And she looked up to see in him a faith in her possible purity, and forthwith began to be the woman he saw.

Luke tells us that as Jesus reclined at dinner in a Pharisee's house, a woman who was a sinner came behind him and aointed his feet. In the chapter of her stormy and shameful life probably Jesus had been the only one who had given hind him and anointed his feet. In him she had seen what life really could be, and the wholesome longing may have come to her that she might be like him. His host saw that she was a sinner. Jesus saw further. He saw a woman not yet spoiled beyond hope, as the world might have looked upon her, and when he saw this she began to see it too, and forthwith began to be that good woman.

There are in a very real sense beautiful qualities latent in the life of every man. Only a vision like that of Jesus can perceive them. Only a love like that of Jesus can awakened them, and we too as his followers are here "not to condemn" but "to seek and to save."

Aristotle, the Greek philosopher, has said, "The true nature of anything is the best it can grow into." That is, one's true nature may not be what he appears to be, but the best he may become: one's true nature may not be fully shown by either past or present achievements, but by his highest capacities and promise. The true nature of anything is the best it can grow into. Not by our unworthy but by our exalted moments should we judge ourselves. When we are most unselfish, when we are most aware of God, and our hearts beat in fullest sympathy with our fellow men, then are we the more truly ourselves.

It is largely true that we see what we are equipped by education and experience to see. For example, you send three men, an artist, a botanist, and a lumberman to examine a certain oak tree and bring you a report. The artist comes back with a report on the beauty of the tree; the botanist with its botanical name, Quercus alba, White Oak; the lumberman, 300 feet. He saw lumber. All went to view the same thing. In a way all saw the same thing. Yet it must be said all saw differently, each seeing most clearly what he was equipped by education and experience to see.

Some time ago The Christian Science Monitor, an international daily newspaper published by The Christian Science Publishing Society, contained a story about a "sweet-spirited, motherly woman" who "dwelt in a sparsely settled region in the north where the conditions of living were severe. As is apt to be the case, diversion often took the form of gossip about other people's affairs, and the gossip was not always of a kindly nature. But it was soon learned that nothing of the sort could be broached in the hospitable little cabin where this mother-heart made radiant welcome for all comers, and where all were equally safe. At the first insinuating suggestion of 'They say . . . .' an emphatic 'I do not believe it!' cut the talebearer short; and there followed as often as possible some substantial statement of good regarding the person. What a splendid example of moral courage! She did not make the mistake of thinking that the courtesy due her guest required her to listen, even passively, to a statment of falsity." This woman was a student of Christian Science. She had grasped to some extent the scientifically Christian view of man. By education and experience she had been equipping herself to see rightly. She had the moral courage to stand by and act upon her convictions, and in a short time it was recognized that her view of man had been of untold blessing to the whole countryside.

The photograph one takes depends upon where he places his camera. So one's impression of men will depend upon the standpoint from which he views them, or what he really knows about man. Jesus saw men from the viewpoint of a complete understanding of what man is. He saw more clearly than anyone else has ever seen the good in man. He knew that the real man is ever the perfect expression of his perfect Father, God. He proved this times without number. Had Jesus not known that God alone governs man, could he have instantaneously healed a person who had been for years unable to walk? Had Jesus not known that sight is a quality of Mind which the real man ever possesses, could he have instantaneously healed the man who was "born blind"? Had he not known that health is a quality of Mind which man cannot lose, could he have proved on many occasions and to multitudes of sick folk that they were well? Had Jesus not known that man's life is deathless because God is man's Life, could he have proved instantaneously to Lazarus that though he had lain in the grave four days he was in reality alive and well? Jesus knew better than anyone else the truth about man. Because he understood God fully he understood God's image, God's likeness, God's expression, man.

Where others saw a human being whose normal movements were hampered by distorted limbs, Jesus saw man expressing God's harmonious government. He must have known that, as Mrs. Eddy has expressed it (Science and Health, p. 283), "Mind is the source of all movement, and there is no inertia to retard or check its perpetual and harmonious action." Where others saw their fellow men ill "with divers diseases and torments" Jesus saw—what? Let me answer this question with a sentence from the Christian Science textbook. No other statement I know of presents so concisely and so completely Jesus' view of man and its direct and inevitable result. This is it: "Jesus beheld in Science the perfect man, who appeared to him where sinning mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick" (Science and Health, pp. 476, 477).

Do you ask how it came about that Mrs. Eddy understood so well the background and method of Jesus' marvelous works? Because she had devoted years to the study and practice of them. First she was remarkably healed of an injury caused by an accident, and pronounced fatal by the physicians. This healing came about while she was pondering Matthew's account of a healing by Jesus. But to be healed herself was not enough. She must know the Science of this healing in order that others might be healed. For three years, Mrs. Eddy tells us (Science and Health, p. 109), she "sought the solution of this problem of Mind-healing, searched the Scriptures and read little else, kept aloof from society, and devoted time and energies to discovering a positive rule." She discovered the long-lost Science of healing, and submitted it to the broadest practical tests in the healing of disease of every kind for nine years before writing the Christian Science textbook. Indeed so completely did Mrs. Eddy understand the truth upon which Jesus' healings were based, and so clearly has she presented those truths about God and man in the Christian Science textbook, that men and women are now being healed daily simply through the study of this book.

FORGIVENESS

Another outstanding characteristic of Jesus was his readiness to forgive. The old law had said, "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." This was the law of retaliation, but Jesus presented what was looked upon as a moral innovation. He said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." Even his disciples were amazed at such a doctrine. Some time later Peter came to Jesus with a question. He wanted to know whether there was to be any limit to this new rule. So he asked Jesus, "How oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?" Peter had come to the place where he thought it might be possible to do it a few times. But Jesus' reply was, "I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, Until seventy times seven." There was to be no limit.

Many to-day congratulate themselves that they are living in a very practical age, an age of efficiency, an age when lost motion is reduced to a minimum. Suppose we ask them a question. How efficient has been the method of retaliation in overcoming wrong? It has been employed for thousands of years by individuals, tribes, and nations in their attempt to adjust wrongs, and is still in use. Do you know of a single instance in which an offense has been overcome by that method? Not one. There is but one method by which the trouble can be wiped out. There is only one successful way to deal with it. The way Jesus pointed out: forgiveness. Aleyn the poet puts in this way:

"The fine and noble way to kill a foe
Is not to kill him; you with kindness may
So change him, that he shall cease to be;
Then he is slain."

The reason forgiveness is so successful in overcoming wrong is that it wins the wrongdoer. It appeals to the good in him and awakens it and thus gets at the very root of the difficulty.

Unfortunately one's forgiveness of another is still regarded by many as a giving in to wrong; as a manifestation of weakness. If any of you are of that opinion I should advise you to put it to the test. The next time an offense is committed against you, try forgiveness. See if you are man enough to do it. You may find that it may take all the strength of character, yes, and all the godliness you can summon to really forgive. Of this I can assure you, you will never again think of forgiveness as a phase of weakness.

Forgiveness as understood in Christian Science is based upon the scientific fact that evil is not of God, is not a quality of His likeness, man, is not real. It is therefore possible for us to love the person while we condemn the evil he may have committed, and our love for him appealing to and awakening the good in him may bring about repentance and reform, the obliteration of the evil. Punishment might not do it. Promises of reward might not do it. Evil sometimes claims to have more power over men than either fear of punishment or hope of reward. But it cannot withstand forgiving love. That is the one weapon with which we can make sure headway against even intentional offenses. That was Jesus' way. His life-history from the day of his first talk with his disciples until the day of his crucifixion was one forgiveness after another. He tested its efficacy. It never failed.

In our own day our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, used the same method. Thirty-eight years after her discovery of Christian Science, years during which she had been compelled to meet over and over again deliberate attempts to harm her, she wrote (Message to The Mother Church for 1902, p. 19), "Brethren, even as Jesus forgave, forgive thou. I say it with joy,—no person can commit an offense against me that I cannot forgive."

Only one who had experienced victory after victory over evil; only one who had tested and proved the strength of the weapon of forgiveness, only one who was strong in "the strength which God supplies," and had proved it, could make a statement of that kind.

According to Webster's New International Dictionary the principal definitions of the word "forgive" are: 1. "To give up resentment or claim to requital on account of an offense or wrong." 2. "To cease to feel resentment against, on account of wrong committed." According to these definitions your forgiveness of another would mean a giving up of resentment on your part; obtaining a victory over resentment through love. Both definitions seem to imply a struggle within one's own mentality between love and resentment, love being the victor.

Such victories will come more readily as one grows in his understanding of the truth of being; as he understands more fully the omnipresence of good and the consequent unreality of evil. This understanding will enable him to prove that no attempt to harm him can stir him to resentment. But were his understanding of God's omnipresence and evil's unreality still more complete, do not you think that it might help also the one who attempted to harm him? Might it not heal him of the desire to harm his brother man?

This brings us to the consideration of a phase of forgiveness into which the overcoming of resentment does not seem to enter. You will remember an account in the New Testament of the healing of a "man which was taken with a palsy." Luke tells us when Jesus "saw their faith, he said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee." Is it not as though Jesus had said or clearly realized, The phase of evil which has claimed to control you is utterly powerless. It has no dominion over you whatever, for God, good, alone governs man? In other words, Jesus' understanding that neither sin nor disease could be an part of the real selfhood of the one who appeared before him set the man free.

Forgiveness as understood in Christian Science is based upon "the destruction of sin and the spiritual understanding that casts out evil as unreal" (Science and Health, p. 497). Forgiveness in this higher sense does not mean overlooking error, or simply annulling its effect, but means correcting error, destroying it, wiping it out.

Let us use a very simple illustration. In mathematics there is a principle which governs computation. This principle is present, is available, and is unchangeable regardless of locality. Were you to make an error in computation you would not think of trying to get out of the difficulty by beseeching this principle to overlook or pardon your mistake. You would know that the only way in which you could be really freed from it would be through your gaining the necessary understanding of what is true about that particular phase of mathematics. When through that understanding the error had been corrected, had been destroyed, there would remain nothing of it to be pardoned.

Now to make use of the illustration. Through Christian Science you may learn that God is the divine Principle of the universe, including man; that God, divine Principle, is everywhere present, everywhere available, unalterable divine Love; that man in God's likeness is a perfect spiritual being and is governed by God alone; that evil has neither place in nor power over God or His creation, man. Now let us suppose that you believe you are subject to some form of evil; guilty of some wrong. Would you try to get out of the difficulty by beseeching God, divine Principle, to overlook the error? Is not your need that it be corrected, that it be destroyed? Is not the error wholly mental? Is it not rooted in some false belief? Is not, then, your real need knowledge? Is not your need to know more of the truth about God and man as it has been revealed by our Master, and through the Science of Christianity? Will not a knowledge of Truth dispel a belief in error? Then when the error has been corrected, has been destroyed, there will remain nothing of it to be pardoned.

When the sick or the sinning came to Jesus for healing, his understanding of the truth healed them. He healed sin as he healed sickness. The word forgiveness, then, in connection with the healing of sin, can have but one meaning: sin's destruction.

As followers of Christ Jesus should it not be our endeavor to forgive as he forgave; to destroy evil as he destroyed it? In order to do this we must learn to separate completely the belief of evil from our thought of man. How can we equip ourselves to do this? Through the study and practice of the teachings of two divinely inspired works, the Bible, and the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

FEARLESSNESS

Another characteristic of Jesus was his fearlessness. In this he exceeded all other men of his time. The Gospels inform us that Herod feared John the Baptist, the priests feared the people, the scribes and Pharisees feared the multitude, Pilate feared Caeser, Jesus' friends were fearful on more than one occasion, and lastly, the disciples were so fearful that they deserted in the crucial hour the one they most dearly loved. Among them all Jesus alone was unafraid.

Quite early in his ministry he became aware that the truths he was teaching were no obnoxious to those in authority that sometime they would cease to tolerate him. Yet he continued to teach. He knew that his attitude toward man ran counter to the traditions and prejudices of nationality, race, caste, and creed, yet he continued to deal with men as individuals and upon the basis of their needs. He foresaw that his practice of the truth about God and man would result in his betrayal and crucifixion, yet he did not cease his healing works. He knew that he was surrounded by enemies, that he was, to use his own expression, as a "sheep in the midst of wolves." Yet he was unafraid.

He detected fear in the minds of others. He recognized what they were fearing. But he saw further and perceived the unreality and powerlessnes of fear in the same situation. He encouraged his disciples to "Be not afraid," to "Fear not," and on one occasion he rebuked them with, "Why are ye fearful?" If Jesus could be unafraid in a situation which everyone else feared, there is but one satisfactory explanation, and that is that he knew more, that he understood the situation more completely, that he saw what they did not see; and his rebuking others for being afraid indicates that he believed it possible for them to see what he saw and to understand what he understood.

Why was Jesus unafraid? Because of the completeness of his understanding of God, his understanding of man, and his understanding of the relation which ever exists between God and man. Fear and understanding cannot dwell together. Jesus knew God as the divine Principle of the universe. He had proved his understanding of Principle. He had proved over and over again God's ability and willingness to meet the needs of His children whether the need be the supply of food, the restoration of health, the protection from disaster or even resurrection from the grave. Jesus did not merely believe in God. He knew God to be man's perfect Principle, and was able to prove this. He was a scientific Christian.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, in her endeavor to follow the teachings and practice of Christ Jesus encountered much the same kind of opposition. Is it not strange that the reformer, one who selflessly devotes his life to finding the way and leading his people out of bondage, should be misrepresented and abused? Was it because Mrs. Eddy failed on any occasion to heal the sick or the sinning that she was denounced? No, not in a single instance. Did her instantaneous healings of admittedly incurable disease seem to be the occasion for jealousy and hatred to strike at her? It would seem so, strangely enough. Did her proclamation of a new and truer view of God arouse the enmity of her fellow men? Not especially. It is conceivable that if Mrs. Eddy had confined her activities to speaking, she might have announced her discovery of the truth about God without its stirring the people to enmity against her. But when she put into practice what she had learned about God; when that true view of God was translated into an altogether new attitude toward man, an attitude which differed fundamentally from the universally accepted views of man; when that true view of man was not only proclaimed but proved to be efficacious in the healing of the sick, in the comforting of the sorrowful, and in the reformation of the sinner; when the carnal mind detected that its powerlessness; its nothingness, had been disclosed, it rose in all its pretense to might to destroy its destroyer and aimed its weapon at the Discoverer of Christian Science. Yet she daily continued to teach and practice the truth she discovered.

Writing of her longing to help humanity, the inescapable conflict, and the sure reward, Mrs. Eddy has said (Science and Health, p. 226), "The lame, the deaf, the dumb, the blind, the sick, the sensual, the sinner, I wished to save from the slavery of their own beliefs and from the educational systems of the Pharaohs, who to-day, as of yore, hold the children of Israel in bondage. I saw before me men the awful conflict, the Red Sea and the wilderness; but I pressed on through faith in God, trusting Truth, the strong deliverer, to guide me into the land of Christian Science, where fetters fall and the rights of man are fully known and acknowledged." She foresaw the conflict but she pressed on. She too was unafraid.

Through revelation, reason, and demonstration she acquired an understanding of the truth about God and man. This understanding of the divine Mind, of God and His laws, enabled her to detect the counterfeit operations of the human mentality and its accepted beliefs of cause and effect. She saw that sickness of every kind is based on fear. Not only was she able to discern that fear is the cause of sickness, but she was able to point out definitely the basis of its destruction, as in this passage from our textbook (Science and Health, p. 412), "The great fact that God lovingly governs all, never punishing aught but sin, is your standpoint, from which to advance and destroy the human fear of sickness."

Many are able to testify to-day that through Christian Science they have been able to understand more fully than before God's ability and willingness to meet their needs whatever these may be, and therefore are able to recognize and reject the arguments of fear in their inception, and thus avail themselves of the divine protection which is naturally and justly theirs.

(Sickness A Temptation)

Speaking of the Christian Scientist, Mrs. Eddy has said (Science and Health, p. 450), "Sickness to him is no less a temptation than is sin." Have you ever looked upon sickness in its inception as a temptation? Have you ever thought of it as an argument, a demand, a whispered suggestion? If you think of it in that way perhaps you will feel better able to cope with it. Let me illustrate. Let us compare the temptation to be sick with the temptation to steal. Suppose that you were shown into a room alone in someone else's house and there was some money lying on the table. I shall not say it is probable, but it may be possible under some circumstances, that a suggestion might come to you saying, Take it. What would you do? If you were striving to follow the the teachings of Jesus, our Exemplar, would you not answer it with a definite, No, I will not? and perhaps support that answer with some such statement as if you a Christian Scientist, I am governed by Principle, dishonestly this if you a Christian Scientist, I am honest. I will have nothing to do with it. Suppose the agreement returns, saying There's nobody looking. Will you not stand your ground and just as definitely and decidedly say, No? Suppose it comes again saying, No one would know anything about it. Would you not be even more emphatic, if possible, in its rejection? If you did so do you not think that you would be strengthened and the temptation be weakened each time you met it with a decisive denial?

Now let us suppose that you wake some morning and something seems to whisper. You are ill. How are you going to deal with this suggestion? Are you going to meet it with a vigorous, No, and if necessary support that denial with an affirmation of your immunity from any such thing because you know that you are under God's loving care and protection? Or are you going to examine your body, that is, think about it all over to find out how it feels? Suppose the argument returns, saying, You remember you got wet yesterday. Are you not going to deny emphatically the suggestion that a little water can disturb the harmony of man? Will you not mentally insist that man is under God's government and that His government is harmonious? Thus doing you will reject and refute the arguments, the suggestions, the demands, the temptations to accept as yours something that never did, does not now, and never will belong to you.

The suggestion to steal does not come from the money, neither does the temptation to be sick come from the body. In either case the temptation is mental, and must be met mentally and from this Christianly scientific basis, that God, good, alone governs man.

Looking at sickness in this way, and this is a proper way to look upon it, helps to dispel the fear of it, and helps us to see that it is entirely within our God-given power to refuse it admittance to our mental house.

Through Christian Science we may gain an increasing understanding of God, of His nearness, of His ability and willingness to meet our needs, and thus in ever increasing measure dispel fear from our lives. Our Master led and showed us the way. By parable after parable, illustration after illustration, proof after proof, he endeavored to show us that God is Love alone; that His love completely surrounds, completely enfolds us, and therefore there is no occasion for fear.

Our Leader, Mrs. Eddy, followed closely in the footsteps of the great Exemplar. So clearly did she perceive the unreality of fear that she was able to write in "Retrospection and Intr()spection" (p. 61), "Science saith to fear, 'You are the cause of all sickness; but you are a self-constituted falsity, — you are darkness, nothingness . . . You do not exist, and have no right to exist, for "perfect Love casteth out fear." ' "

According to Christian Science, then, these are the facts: that the man of God's creating is unafraid, and that you yourself are no other than this man.

HAPPINESS

Another characteristic of Jesus was happiness. It is possible that this statement may surprise some of you. Can it be possible, you say, that Jesus was a happy man? Did he not encounter opposition, rejection, and persecution such as no one else has ever experienced? Yes, that is true, and because of these he has been called the "Man of Sorrows." But do you really believe that title fittingly described his character, or habit of mind? True, he endured ingratitude and persecution unspeakable. But did he not win a spiritual victory over them in every instance? He was always victorious. He lived habitually in the sunshine of his sureness of God. He said that he abode in his Father's love, that he desired that his joy might remain in his followers, and that their "joy might be full." In the light of what Jesus knew, of what he had proved over and over of God's love and nearness, can we think of him as other than joyous and happy?

There may be those who are so sure that Jesus was habitually sad and sorrowful that they feel that his followers should always be grave and long-faced, indeed they may even go so far as to doubt the Christianity of anyone who is habitually joyous. But would not this be due to a misunderstanding of Jesus' character? In this connection permit me to quote a sentence or two from a very well-known clergyman and writer. He says, "Goodness which is not radiant has something the matter with it. Goodness which, however impeccable, makes life seem cramped, pinched, restrained and unhappy, is not real goodness. Such good people are often exasperating nuisances. One who has to deal with them understands the little girl's prayer: 'O God, make all the bad people good—and make the good people nice!' " I suppose she meant, make them pleasant, cheerful, and happy.

But let us look at this subject from the viewpoint of Christian Science. Mrs. Eddy has said (Science and Health, p. 337), "For true happiness, man must harmonize with his Principle, divine Love." Did not Jesus' life abundantly demonstrate his at-one-ment with the Father? Did he not then possess true happiness? Mrs. Eddy has said futher, "Happiness is spiritual, born of Truth and Love" (ibid., p. 57). Surely then, Jesus, who manifested all the spiritual qualities without measure, must have been the happiest of men.

An examination of Mrs. Eddy's use of the word "happiness" and the many times she uses it in combination with "health" or "holiness" will show that she regarded happiness as a natural, inherent, and essential quality of man.

A well-known hymn (Christian Science Hymnal, No. 169) tells us that the man "whose life of care and labor flows, where God points

MENLO PARK

The Christmas tree at Sacred Heart Convent, today, will be largely attended by the children and friends of the institution. This annual affair is always looked forward to by the pupils of the school. A splendid program is usually rendered to the edification of all. All the children are given useful gifts by the kind nuns, who are interested in the welfare of the little ones.

During the first part of next month there will be a joint installation of the Native Sons and Native Daughters' parlors. It is to be a gala event at which several grand officers are to be present, including Grand Trustee Shortridge.

Wilbur Brown, young son of Mr. and Mrs. George Brown, is home for the holidays. He is attending St. Patrick's Seminary, where he is studying for the priesthood. He graduated at the head of his class from St. Joseph's Parochial School, last June. He is an unusually bright boy with a vocation for his sacred calling.

George S. McPherson is here on a short visit to his father. Young McPherson is connected with the U. S. ship Melville, now at San Diego. He is in the medical corps and is studying medicine. His grandfather, the late Dr. George McPherson, was a surgeon in the U. S. Navy during the civil war and for many years was a prominent physician and surgeon in San Francisco. The lad's father was with Roosevelt in his siege of San Juan Hill during the Spanish-American war. The boy's father was married in All Saints Church, last week. George has a laudible ambition to become prominent in the medical profession.

Leon Douglass and family, on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, gave their annual Christmas tree to the children of the town. About 300 little tots were present to receive gifts. The Douglass family enjoyed distributing the presents to the anxious children, who look forward every year to this joyous occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Douglass and their charming daughters are never so happy as when pleasing the little ones and making their hearts beat with joy with yuletide gifts.

Ward E. Monroe, the real estate operator, is remodeling his office. Among improvements are a neatly furnished room for his stenographer and a sales department for his assistants. Monroe expects a big rush of business after the holidays and is preparing to handle it.

The Native Sons and Native Daughters gave a joint Christmas tree in the Masonic Hall, to the children of the city, Monday. Preceding the distribution of gifts by Santa Claus, a program was rendered by the youngsters. The Native Sons and Daughters lent their every effort in making it pleasant for the children, who appeared to enjoy the presence of Santa Claus, who came through the front door with a great flourish of bells and loaded with prescious presents for all. Jack Bracesco was the Santa Claus that brought great joy from the icy regions of the north to the little ones. Refreshments were served the youngsters after which the gifts were distributed. Games were indulged in until a late hour.

Postmaster Larrecou reports the Christmas business at the local office larger that at any previous year. The community is growing and this is a good indication of the growth.

The rumor that was current last week, to the effect that Mr. Montell, who lives in Stanford Park, was to be selected city judge, in the event of a vacancy, has no foundation in fact. Mr. Montell is a very capable man and one who would fill the position with credit, but in as much as there is not likely to be a vacancy, we cannot yet call him judge. Then, too, he may not care to wear the ermine.

The Kavanaugh Construction Co. has been awarded the contract to build a new road from the State highway to the old Stonfard home, now known as the Convalescent Home. The old thoroughfare that skirted the brink of the San Francisquito creek to the ancient dwelling, is to be abandoned. The old road is hallowed with memories of the past, when Senator Stanford and his wife traveled it daily to the Menlo Park station. Over it went men and women of fame, who were entertained by the senator at the staid homestead, that often, in other days, was the scene of gay gatherings. President Harrison was a guest of the home in 1894. King George, when Prince of Wales, visited it in the 80's. In the early 60's George Gordon, the first sugar refiner in San Francisco, built the home on a 300-acre tract.

A sad story surrounds the Gordan family. The tale is replete with tragedy and romance. After the death of Gordon, his wife lived in luxury at the residence, surrounded with a retinue of servants. Her brother, Mr. Clark, came from England to live with his sister. He married one of the servants.

At the death of Mrs. Gordon and Clark, the servant-wife became sole heir to the vast estate. In 1876 she sold it to Senator Stanford and moved to her former home in Ireland.

Stanford began at once to buy the surrounding lands until he had acquired 11,000 acres, on a portion of which the university now is located.

By the deed of gift to the university, this property can never be sold. It must remain as a part of the institution for all time.

However, leases for 99 years may be granted to those wishing to live on or near the campus.

The abandonment of the old road brings sadness to the pioneer, who knows its history and the sentiment with which it is associated. The new road is to be about two hundred yards below the old thoroughfare.

The city council met in regular session Tuesday evening. All members were present.

A communication was read from F. J. Furnivall, explaining why he did not appear as requested by the council at the last meeeting. City Attorney Whitworth, in this connection stated, that Furnivall's lawyer had approached him with a proposition to compromise his case. He was given ten days to vacate a portion of the building he was erecting without a permit. After considerable discussion the whole matter was laid over to December 30.

The matter of the putrid water of the Bear Gulch Water company, complained of by Mr. Sergeant, was taken up and discussed. Sergeant urged the council to petition the railroad commissioners to investigate the matter. Sergeant thought this would bring a solution of the question, as the company would not like to have the affair aired before the commission.

Blake, commissioner of safety and welfare, said that the company was about to complete its new reservoir when conditions would be better. The chlorination of the water was necessary at this time and hence the odor that was not harmful. Sergeant's complaint concerning the poor condition of Arbor avenue, near Santa Cruz, was answered by Commissioner Anderson, who said that it would be useless to patch the street. It would be a waste of money. Both matters went over to December 30 for further discussion.

The application for a permit by Mr. Shilborne, on Cottage avenue, for an addition of a paint shop to his garage, was laid over for investigation by the building inspector.

An amended ordinance was presented, amending the zoning ordinance to permit the construction of a building on a portion of a lot. This was necessary owing to the extending of Live Oak avenue, whereby a portion of a lot remained after the seggregation of the street.

The matter of moving the Roper store building to the end of the property, recently purchased by the Associated Oil Company, caused much discussion. The concern was granted a permit to remove the structure some months ago and before the zoning ordinance was adopted. In order to strengthen the position of the council in granting the permit, City Attorney Whitworth thought best to amend the zoning ordinance. Thomas Furman said the biulding was a disgrace to the community and should be torn down and replaced by a new one. It would be good policy for the council to get the old building off the main street. The mayor responded by saying that other buildings were just as unsightly, but nothing could be done.

Thomas King, representing the oil company, explained his concern was willing to co-operate with the council in the matter and asked that a continuance be granted, to enable the company to look further into the matter. On motion of Anderson, seconded by Crane, the matter went over to December 30.

The Dolan Wrecking Company of San Francisco, is engaged in wrecking the old buildings on the Associated Oil Company's corner, recently bought from Smith of Palo Alto. The store on the corner is to be removed to the Larrecou building. Many of the ancient structures that were wrecked yesterday were erected by Mrs. Coxin, more than 40 years ago, and were land marks.

Mr. Greenback recently took over the New Bridge properties and is going to push the sale of the land. The Bohannon company is the sales agent and is engaged in disposing of the land in small parcels. Belle Haven City is located on the holding. The youthful municipality promises to be one of the big cities of the peninsula in the near future.

The mayor of San Francisco, Angelo Rossi, had a romance in Menlo Park more than a quarter of a century ago, that did not culminate as romances usually do, in marriage. It is a fascinating love story now forgotten.

The Peninsula Police Officers' organization will hold its monthly meeting at the New Turkey Sandwich Shop on the highway on Tuesday evening, December 30. The Menlo Park police department will be the host. Clarence Merrill, chief of the crime department of Sacramento, will address the meeting, as will District Attorney Franklin Swart. About one hundred officers are to be present. It is to be a joyous occasion for the alert guardians of the peace.

CATS ARE BLAMED

PITTSBURG, (UP)—William H. Tenser, merchandise broker in his suit for divorce claimed his wife, Gertrude F. Tenser, premitted cats to sleep in bed with them. Mrs. Tenser charged that her husband was fond of one of the cats and called the feline his "lucky piece." She denied she ever threatend him with a butcher's knife.

BOSTON (UP)—When Willard D. Tripp retired as chief inspector of settlement and support claims of the Massachusetts State Welfare department recently, he ended an unbroken span of 63 years in the state service. Tripp, 92 years old, was the oldest state official in point of service.

out the way" is happy. Should not this be our daily endeavor, to seek and to follow God's guidance in the ordinary affairs of everyday life, yes, "in every act, in every thought"?

Thus doing we shall be led aright, not only in the many decisions incident to our daily occupation, but in the realm of thought we shall be empowered to detect and reject those thought-parasites, such as selfishness, expectation of evil, resentment revenge, and fear, which could not develop in us save only as they fed upon us, and we shall be inspired to implant those thought-seeds which as they grow will make us resemble more and more in character our great Exemplar.

"When Jesus, our Great Master came
To teach us in his Father's name,
In every act, in every thought,
He lived the precepts which he taught.

"So let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess;
So let our works and virtues shine,
To prove the doctrine all divine.

"Thus shall we best proclaim abroad,
The honors of our Saviour, God,
When the salvation reigns within,
And grace subdues the claim of sin."

KING'S DAUGHTER

That doesn't make her a princess though. Strange? No. She's Martha Chandler, and her father is Asa Chandler, Jr., the Coca Cola king from Atlanta, Ga. The pretty southern girl, visited in San Francisco over the holidays, has just completed a long cruise of the Pacific.

'IT'S THE BUNK'

It's this business of "join the navy and see the world," said little Helen Bachman, who arrived in San Francisco Saturday, aboard the Matson liner Manoa with her father, Lieut. L. A. Bechman of the U. S. submarine R-20. Helen's rather petulant remark explains itself in the fact that her father has been transferred to the east coast, and she hated to leave the warm climate of Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, for the ice and snow of her new home to be.

WISCONSIN BIRTHS DOWN

MADISON, Wis. (UP)—Wisconsin births in 1929 fell below those of any year since 1920, the state board of health has announced. Approximately 62,000 births were recorded in 1921 when the population of the state was 300,000 below the present level, while last year only 55,592 births were listed.

BEATS STATE TAX

AUSTIN, Tex., (UP)—The late E. D. Farmer of Parker County Texas, found a way to avoid the Texas Inheritance Tax and do as he pleased with his estate. He made a will leaving to the board of Regents of the University of Texas the amount that otherwise would have been paid in inheritance tax. The state comptroller investigated the estate and computed this to be $209,933.10. The last Texas legislature passed a bill accepting it as a University endowment in lieu of the tax.

ALABAMA HOLD "PAPER" MARGIN

The score sheet has proved so erroneous in so many football games this year that it possibly should count for little now that the regular season is over.

But the tempation exists to approximate a "paper" comparison between the Rose Bowl opponents at Pasadena, this New Year's Day—Alabama and Washington State.

Alabama appears due to win.

There are no directly connected, mutual opponents, but by the roundabout method it is found, first:

Duke defeated Villanova, 12-6, Washington State defeated Villanova, 13-0, Duke defeated Kentucky, 14-7, and Alabama defeated Kentucky, 19-0.

On paper that appears to show Alabama at least two touchdowns stronger than Duke, and Washington State one touchdown better than Duke.

PAPER EDGE FAVORS ALABAMA TO WIN

One from two traditionally leaves one, which would appear to be the paper edge of Alabama over Washington State—assuming the Duke, Villanova, Kentucky "dope" is infallible, which of course it isn't.

By the same round-about method —which costs you nothing but time —it is found, second:

Alabama defeated Vanderbilt, 12-7; Vanderbilt defeated Minnesota, 33-7; Minnesota tied Stanford, 0-0; Stanford defeated Oregon State, 13-7; and Washington State defeated Oregon State, 14-7.

Those figures appear to place Washington State, Stanford and Minnesota on virtually the same plane, from which apparent fact one proceeds to the intelligence that Vanderbilt whipped Minnesota, 33-7, only to suffer a 12-7 licking at the hands of Alabama.

Einstein might find in that a five-touchdown supremacy for the Alabama Crimson Tide, which of course is as ridiculous as the theory of relativity is understanable to the average man.

OTHER FIGURES SHOW ALABAMA FAVORITE

But the West Coast will be interested in the third round - about, which indicates Alabama 42 poins the superior of Washington State. Progressively the scores are:

Alabama beat Ole Miss, 65-0; Ole Miss tied Chicago, 0-0; Michigan beat Chicago, 16-0; Michigan beat Minnesota, 7-0; Stanford tied Minnesota, 0-0; Washington State beat Oregon State, 14-7; Stanford beat Oregon State, 13-7—Alabama 42 or 43 up, it doesn't matter. But:

Alabama defeated Kentucky 19-0; Kentucky defeated Washington and Lee, 33-14; West Virginia defeated Washington and Lee, 33-13; Oregon State defeated West Virginia, 12-0; Stanford defeated Oregon State, 13-7; Washington State defeated Oregon State, 14-7—which makes Washington State one touchdown better than Alabama.

If further proof is desired:

Stanford defeated Dartmouth, 14-7; Dartmouth and Yale tied, 0-0; Georgia defeated Yale, 18-14; Alabama beat Georgia, 13-0; Stanford beat Oregon State, 13-7; and Washington State beat Oregon State, 14-7—which places Alabama ten points, roughly, ahead of Washington State.

FLAMING RED UNIFORMS FOR WASHINGTON PLAYERS

By JAMES S. SHEEHY

United Press Staff Correspondent

PULLMAN, Wash., Dec. 23 (UP) —Flaming youth!

That's what the big Washington State college football team will resemble when it plays Alabama at the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, January 1, 1931.

The Pacific Coast champions will be a symphony in red—from their helmets, to the soles of their shoes. New red silk jerseys and red silk pants, new red head guards and red shoes have been ordered. Coach Hollingsberry's men will be able to match anything that Alabama has to offer in the way of sartorial splendor.

Hollingsberry and his veteran eleven have no idea of making their Pasadena cuting a mere dress parade. They are going to the Rose Bowl to win, just as Alabama is, which should insure a fine game.

Betting men, for an unknown reason, seem to be making Alabama the favorite. Perhaps the Washington State team has failed to click during late November as it did in taking California and Southern California on successive Saturdays in October.

But mark it that the Cougars have one of the strongest defensive teams in the United States. Not a touchdown has been scored on running plays through Hein, center; Parodi and G. Hurley, guards; Edwards and Ahlskog, tackles, and Maskell and J. Hurley, ends. Edwards and Hein made practically every all-coast team and both made some all-American teams.

Hollingsberry's men have plenty of power, what with Schwartz, fullback, and two shifty backs in Ellingsen and Lainhart. Bill Tonkin, quarterback, is a fine safety man and returner of punts, but some have wondered if his choice of plays has been responsible for the failure of the team to score more often.

ANNUAL GOLF FIXTURE

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 23 (UP)—The Southeastern Open Golf tournament has been established as an annual winter links event, it was announced here today. The event was won last year by Bobby Jones. The 1931 play will be held March 30 and 31, on the Forrest Hills course and on the course of the Augusta Country club. A purse of $5,000 will be posted.

MILL AIDS UNEMPLOYED

MANCHESTER, N. H. (UP)—America's biggest textile mill has inaugurated a system of unemployment relief calling for the financial co-operation of both the Amoskeag Company and its approximately 9,000 operatives. Each worker is contributing 10 cents weekly to the unemployment fund and the company is matching these donations, dollar for dollar. The fund is expended to provide relief for Amoskeag employees who are idle at present.

Saving is a habit. And a good habit. The sort of habit that you need never break. It is astonishing how much of a hold this saving matter gets on you, once you start. Astonishing, too, how the dollars do pile up—even only a few a month.

BUFFALO NICKEL NEW TO HER

YORK, S. C., Dec. 23.—UP.—John Wallace, who buys eggs from rural residents and sells them in towns and cities near York, found a woman who had never seen a "Buffalo" nickel and didn't believe it was good coin of the Republic. Out of change except for a number of the nickels, Wallace tendered them to her in payment for eggs. "That ain't real money," the woman declared. "At least I never saw any like it before. So she deducted two eggs from a dozen and accepted the Buffalo nickel.

Deer Shooting Here

By HOMER L. ROBERTS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Dec. 24. (United Press Staff Correspondent) (UP)—Deer hunting is one outdoor sport in California that never decreases in poularity.

Last year a total of 24,131 bucks were killed, as compared with 21,515 in 1929, an increase of 14 per cent, according to a checkup of deer tags returned by hunters to the state fish and game commission.

The number of deer killed this year was also a gain of 12 per cent over 1928 and 25 per cent over 1927.

The statement shows 100 deer killed in San Mateo county during the season this year.

"The kill of two, three and four-point bucks has remained the same for the four years the deer tag law has been in effect," said Fred G. Stevenot, director of the state department of natural resources.

"Of all the deer killed each season, approximately 46 per cent are two-pointers, 30 per cent three-point, and 24 per cent four-point and over."

Mendocino county led all counties in California in the total number of deer killed during the 1930 season, with 1,483, the report showed.

Siskiyou county was next with 1,372, Modoc county third with 1,129, Tulare county fourth with 965, and Humbolt county fifth with 917.

In Los Angeles county a total of 637 deer were reported killed, as compared with 691 for 1929, 369 for 1928, and 426 for 1927.

"On the whole," the statement concluded, "the returns show a very healthy condition throughout the state."
